

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Capital Stock of the Central National bank of Tulsa is now One Million Dollars.

That is a simple statement, brief in itself, but reflecting a story of energy and honest endeavor, looking to one end—the building of a broad gauge banking institution, holding the confidence and esteem of the community. Tulsa has grown and prospered beyond the anticipations of the most sanguine, so has the growth of the Central National bank of Tulsa far surpassed the expectations of the men, who a little more than 13 years ago brought it into existence.

Quoting from a publication issued by the bank some years ago:

"The conception of the Central National bank was along broad lines, the question of profit being secondary to that of an institution that should be recognized as standing for only the clean-cut and legitimate in business, an institution whose province should be to foster the commendable and discourage the questionable enterprises in the community. To this policy it has invariably adhered, and thus gained a reputation for intelligent conservatism that is recognized by its competitors as well as its adherents."

It is a pleasure for the management to be able to call the attention of the public to principles laid down and policies outlined in the years gone by, and to point to those same principles and policies, now time-tried and acid-tested, as still governing the conduct of the bank. The personnel of the management has experienced a few changes, conditions have changed, business methods have changed, but the governing policy of the Central National bank throughout all the years has remained unchanged. From time to time as the demands on it have grown the Central National bank has increased its Capital Stock, but only in order that it might better serve Tulsa and surrounding territory. For this reason alone the stockholders did, on May 15, 1920, pay in Five Hundred Thousand Dollars in cash, increasing their cash capital from Five Hundred Thousand Dollars to One Million. In this, its management has but adhered to the policy, by which it has been actuated throughout its existence, to meet the legitimate demands of the business interests of the community, with which it has so long been identified.

The facilities afforded by the Central National bank of Tulsa include every department found in a thoroughly organized and progressive national bank.

COMMERCIAL BANKING—Under this head we invite corporations, co-partnerships, firms, individuals and banks to investigate a service wherein their wants are not only met, but anticipated.

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT—Here we have one of the important and growing divisions of our bank. Located at the very front of our main banking room, it is convenient and easy of access. We have just completed the installation of a new and highly improved system of handling accounts in this section, thus adding much to the promptness and accuracy with which the business of savings depositors is dispatched.

CREDIT DEPARTMENT—Daily the necessity for this department is emphasized. It is a storehouse of useful information, from which we may draw at will for our guidance.

TRUST DEPARTMENT—Affords its customers a service, in all fiduciary capacities, through an organization whose experience and sound judgment in financial affairs has been demonstrated for many years.

It acts as custodian of Securities and collection of income therefrom; Depository of Trust Funds; Executor or Administrator; Trustee; Transfer Agent; Registrar; Guardian; Attorney in Fact, and Receiver.

Issues Foreign Exchange, payable in any country, and self-identifying Travelers Checks for use in this country or abroad.

As Agent for the Cunard Steamship company, can furnish passage and reservations to all parts of the world.

We will appreciate the opportunity to discuss facilities of this department with those who may be interested.

Our banking room is large, airy, light and comfortable and is conveniently arranged for the use of our patrons.

Our Directors are men well known in the active and progressive business of the city, and they take active part in the discussions affecting the welfare of the bank and in planning for its successful operation.

The Officers are experienced bankers, men whose training has particularly well qualified them for the positions they hold, and whose efforts have been successful.

The Capital is One Million Dollars, all paid in cash, and the surplus is Three Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars, all earned, giving the bank a working capital of One Million Three Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars.

The history of Tulsa and the activities of the Central National bank are so closely interwoven as to be inseparable. Always the Central National bank has been pronounced in its loyalty to Tulsa and her interests. We have long known that the time would come when our Capital would be One Million Dollars, and have only awaited the opportune time to make that conviction an actuality. We feel that Tulsa has now reached that stage in her development where an increased capitalization is justified. Our confidence in the American people is unshaken, our faith in Tulsa grows firmer with each passing day, and we are happy to be able to offer its citizenship our increased facilities.

"You are invited to come to this financial institution in the same matter of fact way that you enter a store to secure merchandise or service."

"You will find a welcoming human interest in whatever invites your attention, whether it be depositing money, planning a loan, or any other form of modern banking service. We are here to co-operate with you. Your banking business will receive courteous attention. A friendly call will also be welcome."
